February 25-27, Cloquet Minnesota

Collaboratively hosted by the Minnesota Society of American Foresters and Foundation's Vital Forests/Vital Communities Initiative, and sponsored by M conference will be an opportunity to explore the role of forests in global climate change and hear about carbon credit trading and ecosystem market projects already in the ground. The conference kicks off Wednesday evening with a presentation by polar explorer Will Steger, who will share in images and words his eyewitness ongoing catastrophic consequences of global warming.

Last year's conference was the kick off of the legislative push that led to the passage of the Rural Woodlands Classification and expansion of the SFIA payment program. This year's conference is a fascinating three days for all interested in stewardship of Minnesota's forests.
